

Design Scavenger Hunt!

Explore some design in your home and neighborhood with this design scavenger hunt!

Learning objectives

- Observation and analysis of objects
- Better understanding of what can be considered design

Materials needed

- Eyes
- Computer/tablet/phone – something that can take a picture.

We interact with design every day. It is all around us, influencing our choices and how we interact with the world. Go on this design scavenger hunt around your home and neighborhood and think about the objects and experiences around you that use design. Take photographs of the things you find and share them with us! You can tag us on social media (@designmuseumchi on Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter) or email us at info@designchicago.org. We're looking forward to seeing your work!

Can you find these things?

- A book with only typography on the cover.
- A building in your neighborhood with an interesting design element.
- A stamp and paper to write a thank you letter to one of your design heroes.
- An object in your house that you think could benefit from design improvement.
- The "best designed" product in your house. (Why is it the best designed? Is it the most useful? The easiest to use? The most fun to use?)
- Make a color gradient out of something you have in your house. (Packages you find in your cabinets, socks, books, toys, etc.)
- Draw a self-portrait using only 1 line. Don't pick up your pencil!
- Design an outfit with something you'd wear to bed, something you'd wear to work/school, and something you'd wear to exercise.
- Something where you live that is designed to make you feel a certain way, or think a certain thing. (For example, does the design of a cereal box make you think a certain thing, like "This food is a healthy choice? How?)
- An object that uses rhythm as part of its design.

When you're done with your project, take a picture and share it with us! You can tag us on social media (@designmuseumchi on Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter) or email us at info@designchicago.org. We're looking forward to seeing your work!
